Taught in the International Political Science Association’s Summer School, São Paulo, Brazil, 22-26 January 2018.

GMG/KNOMAD Workshops on Learning, under the auspices of the Global Migration Group, the International Organization on Migration, and UNITAR (first workshop, New York, November 2013; second workshop, Geneva, March 2014). I was the lead academic facilitator for a series of workshops on teaching and learning in the field of global migration, focused on helping UN trainers diversify their pedagogical toolkits and strategies for reflective assessment.

“Interpretive and Relational Research Methodologies,” annually (held 3 November 2012, 5 November 2011, 6 November 2010, 3 October 2009; 4 October 2008, 17 November 2007, 11 November 2006, 19 November 2005); I created and organized a workshop bringing together eight Ph.D. students and five faculty members for a day-long series of structured discussions about the application of non-statistical modes of knowledge-production in International Relations. Held in conjunction with the ISA-Northeast Annual Meeting. The workshop was recently turned into a permanent part of the ISA-Northeast Annual Meeting, with an annually elected Workshop Coordinator position being added to the leadership structure of the Association.

“Close encounters of the third kind: Science Fiction and the Study of the Now,” 24-25 September 2012; co-organized, with Gerard van der Ree, University College Utrecht) a workshop on the theoretical and pedagogical use of science fiction in the study of world politics. We received a grant from University College Utrecht to fund this workshop.

“The Relational Turn in International Relations,” 25 March 2008; co-convener (with Daniel H. Nexon, Georgetown University, and George Lawson, London School of Economics) of a day-long workshop held in conjunction with the annual International Studies Association meeting.
